

Introduction

This poster analyzes movie record proportions with emphasis on Avatar's share. It compares domestic box office earnings for top movies in 2003. It also examines worldwide earnings of leading films from 2005 for comprehensive insights.

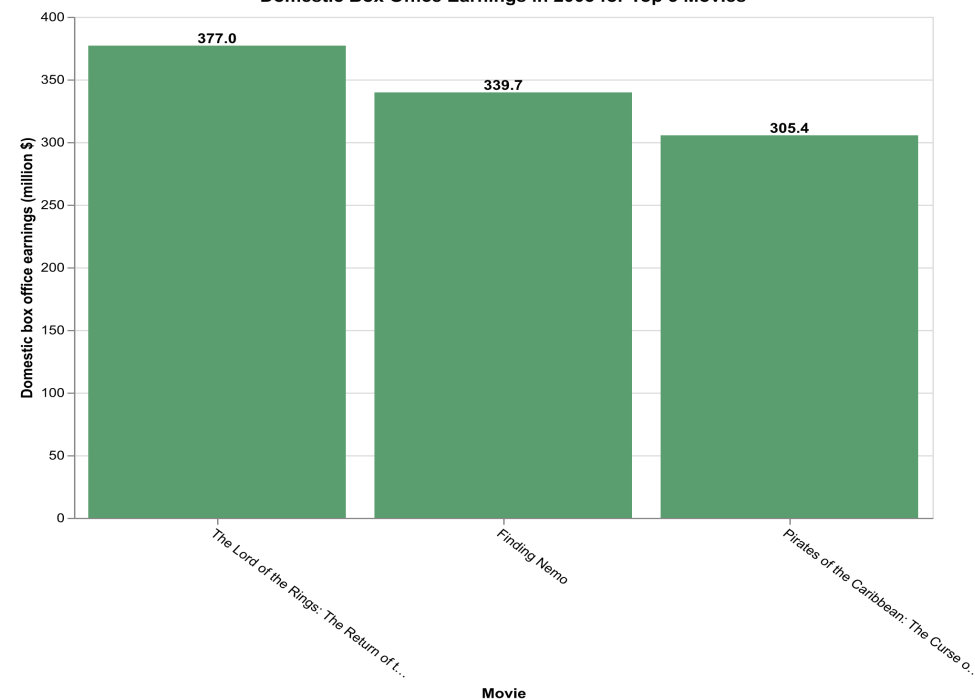

Which Movies Dominated Box Office Earnings Over Time and Regions?

Proportion of Records: Avatar vs. Other Movies

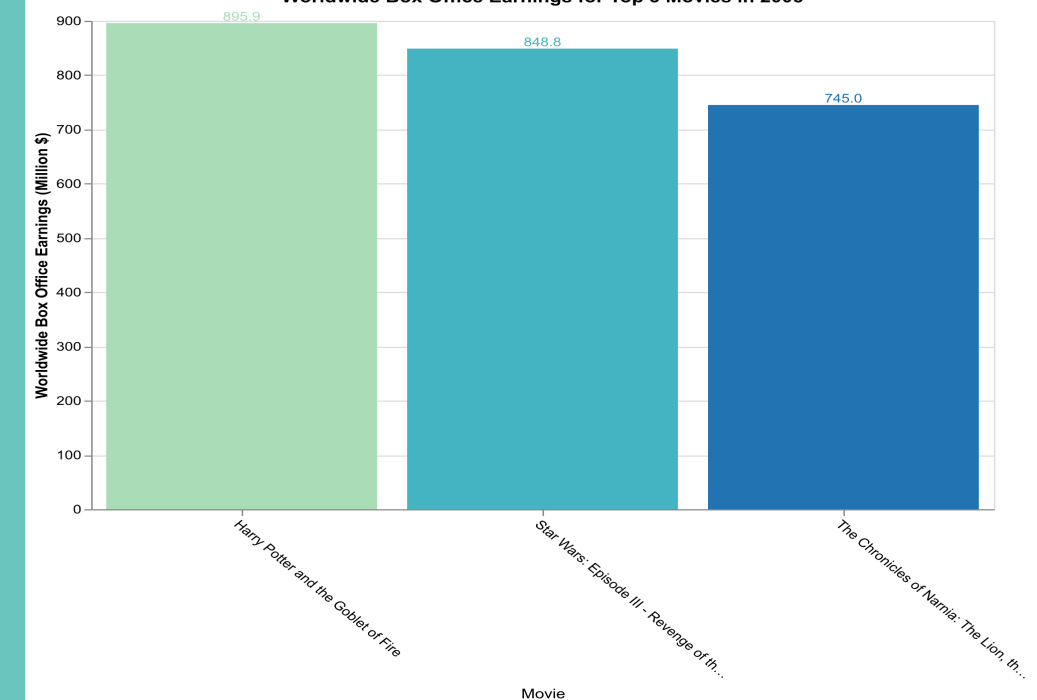

Avatar accounts for 0.5% of movie records, while other movies hold 99.5%, showing Avatar's distinctly small share.

Domestic Box Office Earnings in 2003 for Top 3 Movies

"The Lord of the Rings: The Return of the King" earned $377M, "Finding Nemo" $340M, and "Pirates" $305M in 2003.

Worldwide Box Office Earnings for Top 3 Movies in 2005

"Harry Potter and the Goblet of Fire" earned $895.9M, "Star Wars: Episode III" $848.8M, and "Narnia" $745.0M worldwide in 2005.

Conclusion

Avatar holds a very small share, only 0.5%, of all movie records. In 2003, The Lord of the Rings earned the highest domestic box office at 377 million dollars. By 2005, Harry Potter led worldwide earnings with nearly 896 million dollars. These insights highlight the varied success of movies across years and regions.